

Everybody needs good neighbours

You've brought puppy home and for the most part, he's settling in well. All except for one small problem—it's a noisy one actually—your puppy crying when you're not there or when you leave him alone in his crate.

Many new dog owners and puppy pre-school attendees will cite this as a major problem. For how long should you leave the little guy before it gets all too much and you give in? And then there's the worry about what to do if his crying bothers the neighbours. Nobody wants complaints from cranky neighbours, so a great idea is to send a note and a box of chocolates to the households in your immediate surrounds. Something like...

Anyone who considers a pet a beloved friend, companion, or family member knows the intense pain that accompanies the loss of that friend.
